Introduction and Acknowledgements

Introduction and Acknowledgements

This is the sixth edition of the European studbook for Heosemys spinosa. This sixth edition contain all information updated until 31.12.2006.

As in 2004 and 2005, Jersey was again successful in breeding this species. Although some other institutions also reported that their animal laid eggs, it is worrying that Jersey is still the only institution to breed this species in Europe. An effort needs to be made to improve this situation as it is urgent to have other institutions with breeding capability.

I would like to express my gratitude to TSA Europe especially to Henk Zwartepoorte and Martin Wees for their efforts in the conservation of this species. The research and conservation projects they intend to start, namely on mortality causes, treatment of confiscated animals, DNA research and in-situ conservation will surely make a huge difference for the conservation of this species.

I also would like to thank to all the people and Institutions that contributed to the compilation of this studbook:

- To all participating institutions for their co-operation and full involvement in this program;
- To the Board of Directors of the Lisbon Zoo that, throughout its support, allowed us to elaborate this Studbook;
- To all people that worked in this Studbook edition, especially to Orlando Silva.

Co-ordinators/studbook keepers in other regions:

A studbook is kept by ESF-European Studbook Foundation. The studbook keeper is Martin van Wees from The Netherlands.

Studbook:

First edition was published in 2002.
Most recent edition was published in 2007 with data current to 31.12.2006.
Next edition will be published in 2008.

Husbandry guidelines:

Husbandry guidelines were published in the first edition of the studbook.

Conservation activities:

DNA research for subspecies determination. There are morphological differences in animals of unknown origin and it is very important, for conservation issues, to clearly determine the geographic origin of the ESB and ESF population and to breed only with animals having the same subspecies. This research carried on by Dresden Museum.

Research:

Durrell Wildlife Conservation Trust is compiling data on the reproduction on this species. An article was published in 2007 with all this data:

Goetz, M. (2007): Husbandry and Breeding of the Spiny Turtle Heosemys spinosa (Gray, 1931) at the Durrell Wildlife Conservation Trust. - Radiata (English edition), Lingenfeld, 16 (2): 2-15.

Post-mortem and health evaluation by a veterinarian institute in Holland.

Publications:

None.

3- Problems

We still have a low birth rates with only one institution (Jersey) breeding this species. We need urgently to develop breeding success in other facilities if we want to have a viable and self-sustainable population of this species in Europe.

It is also important to find out exactly the origin of the animals we have in Europe and determine to which subspecies they belong. This should be done through DNA analysis.

4- Recommendations for the next year

Continue investing in reproduction of this species under human care.

Studbook Analysis

The Heosemys spinosa ESB studbook currently contains data on 383 animals (126 males, 167 females and 90 of unknown sex), 95 (36 males, 52 females and 7 of unknown sex) of which were alive on 31.12.2006. From these 383 animals, 281 (112 males, 126 females and 43 of unknown sex) were confiscated in Macau by Hong Kong authorities in 2001 and transferred to Europe in 2002, 38 were already present in European Institutions before the rescue operation, 33 were acquired after the rescue operation (four were captive born in Jersey and the others came from private hands) and 31 were imported again from Kadoorie in 2007 but will not be included in these analysis.

From the 95 animals still alive on 31.12.2006, 50 came from the rescue operation, 42 came from other origins, and 3 were captive born at Jersey. The sex distribution of the living Heosemys spinosa was the following: 36 males, 52 females and 7 animals of unknown sex. The sex ratio was almost 0,69 male for 1 female.

Most of the 95 living Heosemys spinosa are wild born except 3 captive born animals in Jersey as shown in Figure 1.

5 institutions and 1 private person kept Spiny hill turtles at the time of the rescue operation, and 27 Institutions and 6 private persons received animals from the rescue operation (some Institutions and private persons keeping animals before the rescue operations also received animals from the Hong-Kong group). On 31.12.2006 Spiny hill turtles registered in this studbook were currently held in 19 Institutions and 2 private members of the International Turtle Survival Alliance. Of the 19 Institutions and 2 private members keeping Heosemys spinosa, 1 is in Belgium, 4 in Czech Republic, 1 in Denmark, 3 (2 of them are private) in The Netherlands, 2 in Poland, 2 in Portugal, 1 in Russia, 1 in Spain, 1 in Sweden, 4 in UK and 1 in Ukraine.

The Heosemys spinosa population started in 1978 but with few animals. From 1991 to 1998 there was a slight increase in population but not significant. In 1999 the import of 13 animals to different zoos (Skansen, Poznan and Nikolaev) allowed the population to increase a little more as shown in Figure 2. However, only the 2002 import of confiscated animals from the Kadoorie Farm in Hong-Kong represents the basis for a possible long term sustainable population of this species in Europe, providing that holders are successful with their captive breeding. Effectively, we cannot continue importing animals from the wild including those that were recently (after 2002) acquired to private people. All this only makes sense if we really start breeding this species in sufficient quantity and institutions.

Heosemys spinosa

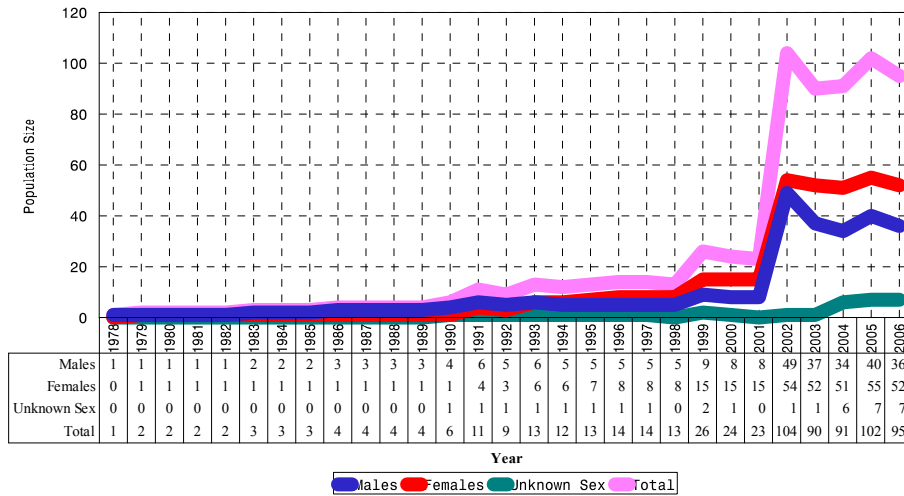

Figure 3 shows the crude demographic analysis for Heosemys spinosa. As we saw previously in the census of the captive population, all the population increases were only due to imports from the wild, the biggest one in 2002 following the EAZA rescue operation. In 2006 an contrarily to the previous years no new animals were acquired from private hands or other sources. No births were ever reported until 2004 when the first captive hatching of a spiny hill-turtle occurred that year. In 2005 there was a second captive hatching, also in Jersey. In 2006 Jersey had again breeding success with the hatching of two animals. The number of deaths was never really significant until the huge increase in 2002 due to the high number of animals imported in the rescue operation which have arrived to Europe in a precarious state. The exports in figure 3 represent animals that were lost to follow-up, including one that disappeared in Randers in 2005.

Heosemys spinosa

Figure 4 show the age distribution of Heosemys spinosa populations within the ESB region. It is important to notice that the age pyramid only represents the 61 animals for which the estimated age was calculated by counting the number of rings in the shell scutes. It would be important that all participants make a rough calculation of the age of their animals. This information is of utmost importance for demographic analysis and in the future for reproduction analysis. It is also important and urgent to sex all animals of unknown sex.

The Heosemys spinosa population shows a very even distribution, with a predominance of old/middle age animals, and almost no young animals. This does not open good perspectives for the future of this population. However there are still seven animals of unknown sex that need to have their sex determined. It is also important and urgent to develop good husbandry to enable more facilities to have breeding success. This will help to improve the age pyramid of the population.

The co-ordination of this program produced some transfer recommendations in the last couple of years to avoid that institutions keep single sex groups or single animals. Most of them were achieved (there are still a few pending recommendations) and most of the participants are now in a breeding situation. It is of the utmost importance that we have balanced group of animals in the most experimented and skilful institutions where breeding will be most probable.

It is not possible to present a graphic of the mortality of Heosemys spinosa by age classes because, most of the animals that died are of unknown age, and because most of the animals were not kept enough time in captivity, and specially because almost no births ever occurred in captivity for which this information would be most important.

The inbreeding coefficient of all animals is zero as they were all wild born and consequently the mean kinship is identical for all animals. Nevertheless the older animals are the more important to breed first, as they have less years to live.
